I met Rose 40 years ago when I took a bus from Toronto to Cincinnati, Ohio to spend a long weekend visiting her daughter, Jennifer (my sweetheart, who became the woman I affectionately call "The Bride").

Grandma Rose is the matriarch of her large American family. As a woman who gave birth to 14 children, she has experienced great joy and tremendous sorrow. Many years ago she suffered the unimaginable. Over a six-month period her youngest daughter was stillborn, she survived hepatitis from a blood transfusion, said goodbye to her beloved father—and then her cherished husband, Douglas, was taken by a sudden heart attack.

Such hardship would cause many to doubt their faith. Rose stayed close to God, the Father and Creator who abundantly blessed her with a rich, meaningful life. She loved and honoured Jesus, her Saviour, through participation in the sacraments and her daily rosary. Rose also continued to seek the intercession of the Holy Spirit, the advocate, who has guided and sustained her, inspiring her relentless service on behalf of young mothers and their unborn babies.

When saying goodbye to loved ones, Grandma Rose is known for her warm hug while she traces the cross on their shoulder or back. This sacred sign of the Trinity is her way of expressing abiding faith and enduring hope.

Trinity Sunday: God is a community. Human words attempt to reveal the mystery we call God. On this feast of the Holy Trinity, we reflect on the communal nature of God, and are challenged to reflect God-like qualities in our human communities. God does not work alone – In the first reading, Wisdom (the Holy Spirit) is connected with God’s work of creation, and in the Gospel, Jesus links his work with the Father and the Spirit. God works for good -In Paul’s letter to the Romans, we read that our faith can help transform suffering into peace and hope. Our human communities are called to work together to build a kingdom of peace and hope. Homework: Pray for our candidates for the sacraments of Confirmation, Holy Eucharist and Reconciliation – the sacraments help us build the one family (community) of God’s children.

Teaching: on the Trinity. The phrase ‘three persons, one Godhead’ captures our understanding of the Trinity. What does this mean? We use the word person to identify that there are three unique and independent beings as revealed by Scripture: Father, Son, Holy Spirit. (We would not know this if Scripture did not reveal it.) Now each person is God, hence each is All-powerful, All-Knowing, and All-loving, and hence, each is indistinguishable from one another to us. On the other hand, humans have traits such as height, hair color, vocal cords that allow for differentiation. Humans also have different intellectual ideas and caring empathies. Now in heaven, our exterior traits will fade into the background, but there will not be divisions about what is TRUTH and what is LOVING. While on earth, humans are called to enjoy the diversity of exterior human traits and are called to work for unity in what is TRUTH and what is LOVING. This is where the Church engages the world on topics of abortion, marriage, assistance in dying, ecology because the Church believes these issues cannot have two sides that are both correct, unlike an item like human hair color where diversity is the norm. Let us ask the Trinity to help the world be more united.
